Flying alone for the first time can be a big adventure for children, but it's also a big responsibility for parents. If you're thinking about booking a flight for your child with Delta Airlines, understanding their unaccompanied minor policy is key to ensuring a smooth and safe travel experience. Delta has a dedicated service to help young travelers make their way from one destination to the next with extra care and attention.

In this blog, we'll dive into Delta's unaccompanied minor policy, including how much the service costs and how to reach customer service if you need assistance.

How Much is the Delta Airlines Unaccompanied Minor Fee?

When you book a flight for your child as an unaccompanied minor, Delta Airlines charges an additional service fee to ensure that your child is safely cared for during their journey. This fee covers the extra assistance provided by Delta staff, from check-in to arrival at the destination.

The Delta unaccompanied minor fee typically ranges from $150 to $200 per flight, depending on the route. The fee is applicable for children between the ages of 5 and 14 who are flying without an adult companion. If your child is 15 years or older, they do not fall under the unaccompanied minor policy and can travel independently without the added service fee.

The fee includes several important services that Delta provides to ensure your child's safety and comfort:

Escort through the airport: A Delta representative will guide your child through the check-in process, security, and to the gate.

Flight supervision: Your child will be monitored during the flight by the flight attendants, who are trained to care for unaccompanied minors.

Arrival assistance: Upon arrival, your child will be handed off to the designated adult, who must show proper identification before the child is released.

Since the fee can vary based on the specific flight route, it's a good idea to check with Delta before booking. For more information on pricing, you can always contact Delta's customer service at 1-877-908-6960.
